Romanoffs, Too

"The Reappearance of the Romanoffs," by Princess Marina Dimitrievna Kropotkin and Dr. Jon P. Speller, will be published by Robert Speller & Sons early next year. This account of the "real" story of the Russian royal family—"real" being quoted because there is so much doubt about their fate although they are supposed to have been executed by the Bolsheviks—indicates that all escaped assassination. A second book by the same publisher, called "The Gollenski Affair" by Guy Richards of The New York Journal-American, covers intelligence activities of the "Tsar-evich Alexei" behind the Iron Curtain, assisting Western countries.
